Food pantries and banks in Sacramento offering support to families.

If you need food in Sacramento, the pantries and distribution centers below can help. The non-profits offer free groceries, perishable items, meals, and emergency food boxes to anyone who needs help. Some charity organizations will also offer holiday baskets to qualified low income families. Or they will help the unemployed or low income apply for CalFresh and other benefits. Get information, including addresses and phone numbers, on the leading food pantries and programs in Sacramento County California.

In addition to offering food, such as vegetables, breads, and meats, the pantries in Sacramento are also a great place to call for information and referrals. For example, learn about where to apply for social services and federal government food assistance programs including WIC vouchers for baby formula or USDA commodities. There are also resources that are specific to California such as CalFresh.

Many distribution centers can also provide non-financial aid as well, such as clothes and thrift stores, to those individuals who are facing a crisis. The pantries to call for assistance and information on free food in Sacramento are below.
